CLOUD BURSTS

It seems that the phenomena of cloud-bursts have not been confined exclusively to Nevada but seem to have visited various portions of both the American and European continents. Yesterday we published an account received by telegraph of a flood in Austria by which a town was destroyed and a number of persons lost their lives. To-day we publish an account of an appalling calamity by which the suburbs of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, were devastated and a large number of lives lost, in addition to which our local and neighboring exchanges come to hand laden with accounts of cloud bursts in our immediate vicinity. So long as these occurrences were confined to Nevada we had a theory in regard to them—which we mentioned last week, viz that owing to the well known fact that the large amount of snow which fell last winter did not melt and drain into the streams and water courses as [illegible] absorbed by the earth. [illegible] preceding the series [illegible] commenced two weeks ago the heat of the sun [illegible] intense, therefore we theorized that this great heat had sucked from the earth the water which had seeped in from the melting snow, which forming into vapor was held in suspension in the form of clouds until by some sudden contact with the mountaintops, or from gravitation those clouds bursted, precipitating a volume of water upon the earth. But the occurrence of similar phenomena in Austria and Pennsylvania knocks our theory out of time, and induces the belief that there must be some general cause. Last Thursday was the day set by scientists for the earth to be touched by the gas of which it is supposed the tail of the comet is composed, and the occurrence just about that particular time of these waterspouts is, to say the least of it, a very singular coincidence and gives the color of probability to the supposition that the appearance of the comet would create more or less atmospheric disturbance and exercise a greater or lesser degree of influence upon our planet. The subject of the relations of the comet to this earth in view of these cloudbursts and other disturbances of nature, becomes an interesting one, worthy of the research of natural philosophers and men of science, and we hope that some of them will investigate the matter and succeed in shedding some light on the subject.—Reese River Reveille, July 28.

A THRILLING INCIDENT

A [illegible] PARALYZED AND NARROWLY ESCAPES DEATH ON THE RAILROAD

[From the Truckee Republican July [illegible]]

A singular and thrilling incident occurred on the eastward bound passenger train on Sunday two miles east of Rose creek near Winnemucca. The train was on a heavy down grade going at a high rate of speed making up for lost time when the engineer Nick Cole thought he saw an obstruction on the track a few hundred yards ahead. The locomotive whistled down brakes, the lever was reversed and every effort possible made to stop the train, which was under tremendous headway. As the train approached the spot, the object proved to be a human being lying with his body across the track. The man (for man it was) was alive, fully conscious of his mortal peril, but unable to move from his position. He had pulled out his handkerchief as a signal, however, and was waving it with his hand. Thanks to the Westinghouse brakes and other means used the train was brought to a stand still when the engine had arrived within a few yards of the helpless man. The man was found to be paralyzed and was picked up, placed on board the train and taken to Winnemucca, where he was provided for at the H[illegible]. He states that while walking along the track he fell down completely paralyzed in his limbs and body and could not move himself an inch. When he saw the train coming, he expected to be crushed to death, and his feelings were too horrible to express. He screamed, threw his arms up frantically and waved his handkerchief. The event is among the most thrilling of railroad incidents.

ALICE BLANCHE OSWALD.—It will be remembered, says the London Age of the 11th ult, that in September 1872 a young American girl named Alice Blanche Oswald, who had come to England from her native land with a Scotch lady who, it was said, turned her out of doors, committed suicide when perfectly friendless and forsaken by throwing herself into the Thames off Waterloo Bridge. The history of the deceased was a very sad one, and many American ladies and gentlemen as well as several English benevolent people determined to give the girl a respectable interment, which took place a few days after the event in the Necropolis, Woking. A committee, chiefly composed of American ladies, was formed to erect a simple monument over the grave of the [illegible]. It has now just been completed. It consists of a rustic cross in marble resting on a cluster of rocks chiseled out of white marble. On a tablet [illegible] the rocks is the following inscription: "Alice Blanche Oswald—Kith[illegible] Kinless Orphan. Died of despair in the [illegible] 5th September 1872 [illegible] From the 20th [illegible] month. By Thy [illegible]" The monument will be placed over the grave in a few days.

THE VALUE OF THE FRENCH FRANC—THE [illegible] CASE TO BE APPEALED.—In the case of [illegible] Collector Arthur, recently decided in New York by Judge Shipman in regard to the value at which the franc of France should be taken in estimating the value of goods subject to duty ad valorem, the Government claimed that the value of the franc should be 19 [illegible] cents under the act of 1873, while the importers held that its value should be 18 4-10 cents under the act of 1846. Judge Shipman having decided in favor of the importers, an appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States by the Treasury Department. Other suits involving the same question are pending, in which the whole amount of money involved is about a quarter of a million dollars.

A dispute in relation to the ownership of the ranch or a portion of it seems to have caused the original difficulty, both parties claiming the ranch. At the time of the shooting Pratt had entered and was occupying Downs' house, which had been vacated, and Downs finding him there ordered him away, when Pratt assailed him and with a butcher knife followed him to the door, when Downs turned and shot him through the window. Downs immediately gave himself up. Deceased was a native of Indiana, aged [illegible].

EQUINE MILLINERY.—A few years ago no one dreamed of the comical but useful sort of bonnet now worn everywhere by the laboring class of horses. It is undoubtedly a great preventive of sun stroke, stagger and other ailments that horseflesh is heir to. To-day the device of some truckman, who, merciful to his beast, covered its head with cabbage leaves or wetted sponge, has become quite a feature of the horse furnishing house. One or two make it a specialty. The demand is large and the co[illegible] small. Fashionable horses do not wear these comfortable protectors. Their head decorations are confined to fly-flapping, betasselled network ear covers. Economy as well as humanity would suggest providing for the comfort of the aristocratic as well as of the humble working quadrupeds. Art might be invoked to lend the poetry of form to graceful masterpieces of equine millinery.—N Y Herald.

HOW AN ARMY WAS DEFEATED.—When Oak Knoll, Napa, was visited in 1870 by the army worm, the young orchard of 6,000 trees was saved in this wise. It was the time of harvest and straw was plenty. SUICIDE OF A YOUNG GIRL.—NEW YORK, July 30—A handsome girl, apparently about eighteen years of age, committed suicide this morning by leaping from the after deck of the ferry boat Hoboken while on the trip from Hoboken to this city. GRANT TO PRINCE LEOPOLD.—LONDON, Thursday, July 30, 1874—In the House of Commons this evening Mr Disraeli moved for an annual grant to Prince Leopold of $75,000. He eulogized the intellectual and scientific attainments of the Prince, whose health he said prevented him from adopting a profession. Mr Gladstone seconded Mr Disraeli's motion. Mr Taylor, member for Leicester, made a brief speech protesting against the grant. Mr Disraeli's motion was then adopted almost unanimously.

THE BEECHER-TILTON CASE.

NEW YORK, July [illegible]—Dr Storrs [illegible] word that he will testify before the committee if possible. A special messenger was sent to Narragansett [illegible] to see Frank Moulton, but failed to find him. Sherman, being interviewed, said: "I have talked with Moulton on this subject. He has nothing to say that will hurt Beecher. It is in the interest of Frank Moulton that [illegible] Moulton does not speak. Moulton held very peculiar relations with Tilton. [illegible] will not hurt Beecher's case. I know what Moulton's testimony [illegible] and wish he would speak."

NEW YORK, July 31—Moulton has not yet appeared before the Beecher Investigation Committee, and it is not known that he will. It is [illegible] remarked by General Tracy, counsel of the Committee, [illegible] for the firm of Woodruff & [illegible], of which Moulton is a member, and [illegible] may thereby be brought to bear on the latter to prevent him from testifying. [illegible] Smith. The reporters have been searching for Henry C Bowen to interview him, but have not been able to find that gentleman either in Brooklyn or New York, or at his country seat in Woodstock, Connecticut.

President Porter of Yale College was questioned by a reporter, and said he expressed his own feeling and that of the best people he knew that confidence in Beecher was at present unshaken. He was content to await for an explanation of Beecher's letters in the belief that it would prove satisfactory.

Dr Leonard Bacon has also been interviewed. He admitted using the expression that if the letter which Tilton addressed to him was published and legal proceedings were not taken against its writer within forty-eight hours, it would be a virtual giving up of the case by Beecher's friends. This remark he made to Dr Buddington, and he was led to make it by the general impression produced upon his mind by the letter when Tilton read it to him. Dr Bacon expressed strong indignation at Tilton's conduct in not bringing the committee [illegible] forward long ago and telling all he knew. One word from him would have settled the whole affair. If he knew Beecher to be guilty he had been compounding felony three or four years. The doctor also said when Tilton came to him with his letter he did not exhibit any animus against Beecher. He believed Tilton was anxious to get his charges before the public, and made his (Bacon's) letter, in which he severely characterized, without naming, Tilton, a pretext therefor.

It is reported that Tilton is preparing a supplementary statement, but he refuses to say anything about it or even to confirm the rumor. He has recently closed his mouth to all interviewers. Gaynor continues determined to press his action against Tilton for libel. Whether he has any case in the Court will be determined when the proceeding comes up next Monday.

NEW YORK, July 31st—The Beecher Investigating Committee resumed its session this evening. Shortly after 8 o'clock Hill entered the house accompanied by a lady closely veiled. About half past 9 a carriage drove up to the door, when a young man jumped out [illegible] up the steps of Storrs' residence [illegible] minutes he came out again, entered the vehicle and was driven rapidly away. In about half an hour the same carriage returned and a gentleman jumped out and rang the door bell. The door being opened, he spoke a few words to the person who opened it and came back to the carriage. The young man who was screening himself in the carriage then came out and stated that he was a messenger from Victoria Woodhull and Tennie C Claflin, to come and had been sent to know from that body if their testimony was required, but they informed him that the Committee did not desire to examine them. He handed the reporters a copy of his communication, which was as follows:

BROOKLYN, Friday 31st, 1874.

Investigating Committee—Gentlemen: My communication of a few moments ago is before you, and having it as you have, it becomes me to insist, so far as I can, upon a more satisfactory reply to its contents. The parties I referred to are in this city with their documents. Do you want either? If you do, send me word. I wait your pleasure in a carriage at your door.

After this had been copied by the reporters both gentlemen re-entered the carriage, which was driven rapidly away.

The Committee adjourned a few minutes before midnight, when a lady came out surrounded by members of the Committee and was taken to the residence of Ovington, from which it was inferred the witness was Mrs Tilton. The Committee will meet again on Monday evening.

A NEW FIREBRAND IN THE FIELD—REV WM H BEECHER—HE THINKS HENRY IS IN A HARD ROW OF STUMPS BUT WILL COME OUT ALL RIGHT.

A reporter of the Chicago Post and Mail on Friday called upon Rev William H Beecher, eldest brother of Henry Ward Beecher, at his residence, 120 West Van Buren street. He is an old man with blanched locks long and thin, and with a full beard as white as drifted snow. But notwithstanding these evidences of age his step is quick and firm, his eye clear, his face full and ruddy, and his bearing in every way giving evidence of a green old age, the fruits of a life of temperate enjoyment of the good things of this life.

The Reverend gentleman shows evidences of the Beecher breed in his broad prominent forehead and large full eyes. He was in his shirt sleeves, and wore a white vest, flap front trowsers of a light shade, and the inseparable article which accompanies him wherever he goes, whether at home or in the church, a black skull cap.

Motioning the [illegible] to a seat and taking one himself, the conversation progressed about as follows:

Reporter—Knowing that I am a newspaper man, Mr Beecher, you will doubtless [illegible] divine without my [illegible] that I have come upon the matter that is now directing so much public opinion—Mr Tilton's charges against your brother Henry Ward. It is a delicate matter, I know, with which to approach a brother, and I should not have the hardihood to do so but for the hope that something you might say would assist your brother in his present sore affliction.

Mr Beecher—Have you read Henry's defense? It is already published.

R—I have.

Mr B—Well, I don't know much about it except from the statement of the case made in the public press. Henry has not corresponded with me nor with any one else upon the subject. But I think he will come out all right.

R—Then you do not think him guilty?

Mr B—Of course it is possible, and I must confess that that statement of Tilton's is but I believe that Henry can refute it. I have been in correspondence with my brother Edward, and he is of the opinion that all will be well in the end.

R—Tilton's statement is rather a rough [illegible] not to crack, especially in view of the documents it contains.

Mr B—I believe those documents were manufactured by Tilton himself, for the way I can't account for his refusal to show them to the Committee.

R—It is asserted that the documents are locked up in the safe of Frank Moulton.

Mr B—Well, that is the [illegible] Tilton [illegible] Moulton's safe so that he might get them how had them himself. He should in glove with Moulton. Besides, if they are locked up, [illegible] is it that he managed to publish some of them in full and make extracts from others?

R—The charge that Mr Tilton used to be in the habit of showing [illegible] manuscript written by himself, but resembling very closely Mr Beecher's handwriting, would lend color to your belief, would it not?

Mr B—Yes. Then suppose Tilton were to produce what he calls the original document. In the light of that statement, before accepting them, it would be necessary to determine whether they were genuine or manufactured.

R—I believe that a part of them are not claimed to be in Mr Beecher's handwriting?

Mr B—That is true. For instance, that [illegible] on which Tilton published. That was written by Moulton.

R—Except the last sentence and the signature, which were in Mr Beecher's own hand, but upon the back of the document.

Mr B—I can easily understand, knowing as I do the extremely sensitive nature of the man, how Henry might be induced to sign such a document upon the circumstances he states by such a man as Moulton, who was really in favor of Tilton while pretending to be a friend of both. Henry says that on account of Tilton's infidelity Mrs Tilton came to him, and he referred her to his wife, who after talking the matter over came to him and presented the case, and he thought it but his duty to advise a separation. Afterward Tilton talked with him and presented the case in such a light that he (Henry) believed that he had wronged him. Under such circumstances I can easily conceive of all the pangs he suffered on account of the wrong which he thought he had done toward Tilton, whom he loved and with whom he had been on the most intimate terms as pastor and friend for twenty seven years. Tilton was only an office boy in the Independent when Henry first knew him. He took

A MOST TENDER INTEREST IN THE FAMILY.

He and Tilton seemed like father and son. Henry had known and taken a deep interest in his wife from her childhood, she being a member of his church, and he loved the children of his two dear friends. So when he found he had come near ruining this loved family by hasty advice it was natural that he should be deeply sorrowful and give way to extravagant expressions in his tenderness of heart. Henry is a brave man and does not fear death. Tilton, in quoting his apology, makes the expression "I could even wish I was dead" to mean a confession of guilt. Now this is not a natural construction to put upon it. Death was not a terrible thing to him. It was but the [illegible] of the results of his life, so when he said "I could even wish I were dead" it was as if he should say "I wish I was out of this trouble." We hear such extravagant expressions about little troubles every day. We frequently say "I wish I was dead," or "I'd rather die than endure this."

R—Wouldn't Tilton's own statement that he believed the wrong and lived with his wife long after its committal go far toward proving that it had never been committed?

Mr B—No, I do not think that it would, for with his avowed free love principles it would not make so much difference to him that his wife had gone astray as it would with men of an orthodox way of thinking. [illegible] that part of the statement, taking it to be true, is not so much to be wondered at.

R—Was not Mrs Beecher the cause of Tilton's dismissal from the Independent?

Mr B—She always disliked him and thought him to be a dangerous man. In fact

SHE FREQUENTLY WARNED HENRY

against him when they were the best of friends, believing that injury to him (Beecher) would be the result.

R—What do you think of Henry Ward's peculiar ideas upon the marriage relation, of which your brother Thomas K speaks in a letter quoted by Tilton?

[illegible]—I don't think he has any.

R—Have you ever talked with him upon the subject?

Mr B—No, but his training was entirely opposed to any such thing. I am the oldest brother and Henry is one of the youngest. I knew him from childhood to manhood, and there was nothing in his life to indicate any such belief. His youth and manhood were entirely exemplary. Our home surroundings were opposed to anything of the sort. We learned obedience and grew up to honor our mother and respect for our sisters, such as they were, and it was impossible for us to do anything to disgrace them.

I have never known any woman except my wife, nor has my brother Edward ever known any woman except his wife, and I believe the same is true of Henry. He was never in the habit of running after women. I believe he looks upon the marriage relation as sacredly as any one. In fact I know he has suffered

GREAT TROUBLE ON ACCOUNT OF HIS WIFE.

And he has endeavored to be faithful to her notwithstanding the sore trials she has cost him. It has separated him from his kindred, from his brothers and sisters, who were prevented from coming to the house on her account. Yet he bore with her and in every way endeavored to arrange matters so that they might visit him. Still I think she loved him and was faithful to him. On another ground this charge seems weak. Henry never was in the habit of running after women, but if he had been, would he have been likely to choose an old married woman? There were plenty of young girls that he could have had if he had been so inclined. There was no difficulty about it. He could have had them if he had wanted to—plenty of them. Then why should he choose an old faded married woman? It is easier for a preacher than any one else, except perhaps a doctor, to take advantage of women.

Some further conversation upon the effects of the scandal upon religion took place, after which the reporter withdrew.

Comments of the Press.

SHUT THE BOOK

[From the Louisville Courier Journal.]

Although a discreet and wholesome sense of public morality would ignore the Tilton exposé, we may take it for granted that however good sense might wish to escape its indecent details and suggestions, we shall not be able to abate the full measure of its effect upon the thoughts of our time.

It is a consequence of evil done by conspicuous persons, and therefore an aggravation of the wrong perpetrated against society, that there is added to the wickedness of the original offense the character and influence of the offender. For this reason the sin of a clergyman is justly considered to be less pardonable than that of a layman, and infinitely more heinous than that of the worldling who makes no pretense of religion.

Of Mr Beecher's guilt the evidence is positive and presumptive and overwhelming. There is but one loop hole of escape possible, the insanity of Tilton, or the devices of managers like Shearman and Wilkeson—both shrewd witted and unscrupulous men—will pass for not much more than the answer[illegible] of the con[illegible].

In order that the public may have a better understanding of the [illegible] should be advised that Tilton is a simple minded man, a genius, having such a gift of speaking and writing as [illegible] for playing the piano. Those who knew him call him "Theodore." He [illegible] beardless [illegible] boy with dreamy eyes and chestnut curls, reminding one of a [illegible] Mississippi. Anything, everything silly and generous, shrewd and Quixotic, is reconcilable with his character. [illegible] the day he ran in to Dana in a [illegible] state of excitement. "Mr Dana," says he, "Mr Greeley has called me a damned rascal." The imperturbable Dana turned [illegible] "No, [illegible] certainly could not have said that." "Well," says Tilton, "he did call me a damned fool." "Oh," says Dana, "no doubt [illegible]." Mr Frank Moulton, Tilton's friend, is [illegible] open hearted, truthful [illegible] against a world of strength [illegible] Shearman, to say nothing of [illegible] chief all his life.

This company of pious [illegible] rich may crush Tilton; they may drive him to insanity, suicide or flight; they may throw around Beecher a net work of plausible sophistries; they may encircle Mrs Tilton with a halo of glittering pseudo martyrdom; they may do what men of resources may always do with an antagonist who is without resources—sit on him. But one thing they cannot do. They cannot restore the fame of the false pastor and the wicked wife. Mr Beecher may be delighted [illegible] the book. The great preacher in the world [illegible] cast down to the splendor of his [illegible] and glory. If he be innocent it is God's will, and he must bear the cross thus put upon him—not the first martyr. If he be guilty he has only himself to blame. Society must, in a matter like this, consult its interests, and it cannot afford to have him installed upon it any longer. It may be unjust, but it is not mean or revengeful, concerned for its real well being, and turning away from one whom it followed so admirably, rather in sorrow than in anger. Mr Beecher cannot escape his destiny. "The End" is written over his story. He should disappear, vanish—

Where of its [illegible] shall darkly fall
On the dream[illegible] sleep of annihilation.

[From the New York Times.]

It seems that everything now depends upon what Mr Moulton has got to say, and since he is reported to be in daily consultation with Gen Butler, who seems to have been attracted by the carrion-like odor of the case, he will probably [illegible] something remarkable. Let us hope that he will at least infuse some of Gen Butler's intelligible English into the controversy.

WHEN TILTON WAS AWAY

[From the LaCrosse Sun.]

If Elizabeth had broken a wash bowl over Beecher's head, or called a policeman, it would have saved a heap of trouble, but then, she didn't know there was any harm in it, and besides, Tilton was away.

A BEWILDERING DIALECT

One of the most curious features of the Brooklyn brawl is the dialect which the chief actors in it use to describe their feelings toward each other. Poor Mrs Tilton's half crazy letters to her husband give the first insight into the forced exaltation of speech and feeling that seems to prevail within the peculiar circle. It is much to be wished that her latest statement should be disfigured by fewer of those spasmodic interjections which only mystify and repel the dispassionate reader. Can any conceivable view of this demoralizing controversy render it worthy of a reference like this: "My thought of following the [illegible] sister contradicts this act of my pen, and sense of the perversion of my lifefaith [illegible] compels me to stand aside till God himself delivers." Again, what an unnatural moonstruck way of looking at simple facts is disclosed in the reference to a sudden change in the mind of Mr Tilton "as a thing to be left for the eternities with their mysteries to reveal."

Mr Tilton is not only expert in the use of this new and confusing dialect, but he adds to it a habit of inverting the natural relations between social cause and effect, which is carried to an extent hardly compatible with any theory of his perfect sanity. Apart altogether from the incomprehensible way in which, on his own showing, he becomes almost an accomplice to his wife's alleged dishonor, apart from his desire to be "reconciled" with his wife's alleged seducer, and the terms of regard and endearment which he lavished upon both, convinced, as he says he was, of the full measure of their sin—in addition to all that, hardly a day passes when the chief complainant in the case does not exhibit to the world some new eccentricity. After declaring under oath that his wife was guilty of infidelity under the most revolting circumstances that it is possible to conceive of, after adding that he found Mr Beecher concealed in his wife's bedroom, Mr Tilton stated before the Committee of Investigation, with tears in his eyes, that "a whiter souled woman does not live to-day than Elizabeth Tilton." Mrs Tilton accuses him in her statement of taking advantage of the physical and mental depression of the most painful crisis through which a wife can pass to force her to sign a lying confession for the purpose of ruining the man for whom he professed unbounded regard. She says that her husband talked about the "God of battles" being in him, and that he lived for the purpose of crushing out Mr Beecher, whose superior he had always been. She denies "each and every particular of his shameless charges," and yet it would hardly be surprising if we hear of Mr Tilton again going before the committee and declaring that his wife is a white-robed saint. Certainly all these people seem to live in a world of their own, and it is useless for an ordinary man to attempt to understand their sayings and doings.

In the peculiar atmosphere of this case, where people shriek in stilted English instead of quietly talking, and where the most hideous offenses do not seem incompatible with perfect sainthood, even Mr Beecher appears to lose his power of lucid expression. A year ago he spoke of living on the "ragged edge of anxiety, remorse, fear, despair," of spending the most of his time in "the power of great darkness." Yet commonplace as the expression of all the trouble is said to be, he still speaks of it as causing "unexampled sorrow and excitement," a "poignancy of suffering" which he hopes no other man may feel, and of being "filled with morbid intensity at the very shadow of it"—whatever that may mean. Should any spiritualistic humbug of the next generation ever profess to summon the spirit of Mr Beecher, he can hardly make him talk more extraordinary gibberish than this. Why was Mr Beecher thus trembling on the edge of ruin, despair, remorse and all the rest of it? Surely these words are not in the least degree applicable to the slight fault—if fault it was—which he now alleges constituted his only offense.

When the chief actors in the business rave as they do, the spasmodic school of journalism is not likely to allow itself to be distanced. From the height of Mars Hill the Tribune fails to find among the Christian fathers, the medieval missionaries or the modern preachers of the faith any pulpit eloquence worth ranking with that of Mr Beecher. The Herald sets him down as another Isaiah or Ezekiel, and the World dismisses his accuser with the terrible epithet of "koprophagous." It would be premature to conjecture what lessons a more discriminating posterity will draw from this celebrated and disgusting scandal. But it may be safely inferred that it will help them to associate the sensationalism which pervaded society and literature during the third quarter of the nineteenth century with a tendency among intellectual people to take occasional leave of their wits.—New York Times, July 28.

A DANGEROUS BEDFELLOW.—On last Sunday night, a short time after the family had retired to their rooms, the son of our townsman James Kibbey felt something struggling between his head and the pillow, and feeling for the object put his hand upon something which he supposed to be a tarantula, and gave it a sling, when the horrible and venomous creature ran down over his arm and body towards his feet. He gave the alarm, when Mr Kibbey lighted a candle and went into the room and examined the bed and bed clothes, but failed to find anything, whereupon the boy laid down again and slept until morning. On cleaning up the room next day Mrs Kibbey found ensconced under the edge of the boy's pillow a large tarantula, which the moment he was uncovered arose to his full height and made battle, when she dispatched it with the broom. The wonder is that the terrible looking spider did not bite the boy, as they usually make battle at everything that comes within reach of their poisonous fangs.—Merced [illegible]

SCIENCE VS. [illegible].—At a private party given at his London house during the past week, Sir Charles Wheatstone exhibited some curious electrical experiments for the amusement of his friends, which will seem to throw some light on certain so-called spiritualistic manifestations. In a dark room, by a stamp of his foot, Sir Charles produced a brilliant crown of electric light in mid air, while musical instruments seemed to be played by invisible hand, whereas the sounds really came from an adjoining room in which the player sat, and were made to appear to be produced by the instruments before the spectators by an ingenious contrivance. A contest between science and the "spirits" in their own chosen feats would be almost as memorable as the celebrated competition between Moses and the magicians.—Liverpool Post.

OREGON

A saw log 113 feet long was cut near Salem a few days ago.

Two Salem nimrods gathered in forty-four grouse in one day recently.

The Dalles paper says that town has too many hoodlums for a small place.

The down train on Tuesday morning made beef of somebody's cow near Canemah.

A valuable horse belonging to R. A. Carpenter of Hillsboro died suddenly the other evening.

Several loads of flour have been sent from Summerville, Union county, to Silver City, Idaho, recently.

Dallas Encampment I. O. O. F. claims to be the banner Encampment of the State. It is a thriving organization.

An insurance man is making a diagram of Salem for the guidance of the Companies doing business in that city.

The last issue of the Salem Mercury contains the Governor's official proclamation declaring the result of the late election.

Twelve hundred bushels of wheat were threshed out by one machine near Salem in less than three hours last Monday.

Dried apples are quoted at 14@16 cents per pound in the La Grande market, wheat 50 cts per bushel, oats 25 cts, and wool 24 cts.

[illegible] claims to have the prettiest town site in the State and Silverton disputes it, and twenty other places claim the same thing.

A letter from Lower Willow creek, Umatilla county, says grain crops and gardens look well and promise fair yields. Cattle are all fat.

It is reported currently that Mr Holladay intends sending some of his fine horses to the Fair grounds at Hillsboro to be put in training.

On Tuesday last week, a little child four years old, a son of Mr Donnell, of Umatilla, was run over by a heavy wagon and very seriously injured.

Gerrand says that he "sleeps much better" since the execution of his sentence was suspended. Much more comfortable than being suspended himself.

A Umatilla county physician reports more sickness in the county than he has ever known before. Most cases, however, yield readily to remedial agencies.

The Salem Statesman tells of a doctor at Wheatland who was hung in effigy last week because the citizens supposed him to be trying to get up a Tilton-Beecher affair.

Last Saturday week Brown Dick, of Pendleton, and Sturgill's sorrel horse ran over the Baker City race course 600 yards for $300, and Sturgill's horse came off victorious.

The deaf mute recently run over by the cars near Oregon City and taken to the hospital at Salem is named L Morris, and has a wife and one child living in Powell's valley.

A colt belonging to Mr Henry Wooly, of Hillsboro, ran against a fence rail Monday, which entered near the last ribs, nearly tearing it wide open. The colt was worth $100.

There are two companies of soldiers in Wallowa valley. They will scout around for about two months, and should no Indians make their appearance the soldiers will return to Walla Walla.

A Hillsboro physician, who has two handsome daughters, raised a small crop of oats this year. One moonlight night, last week, the aspiring young men of the town went to the Doctor's oat field and cut and bound the entire crop.

The Salem School Directors have appointed Miss Clara Watt to the East Salem school, vice Miss Ella Sabin, who accepted the Portland appointment. Miss Mattie G Powell has been selected for the Central School in Mr Watt's stead.

Small amounts of new wheat are coming to the Salem mills, which are not yet ready to run, so people are not in a hurry to haul it in. The Mill Company have already contracted to purchase the product of two hundred acres at 70 cents a bushel.

Our Washington county correspondent says: The oat crop in the Hillsboro plain is yielding excellent, so far as harvested. The wheat is as good as can be expected, considering the comet. The loafers in town have gone to the harvest but left their dogs.

Mr E M Waite, the Secretary of the State Agricultural Society, informs the Record that there has been over seventy tons of hay cut off the Fair Grounds this year against sixty last season. The change in the plans of the grounds made two years ago has proved profitable. There will be hay enough to use during Fair time, and about $300 worth surplus to dispose of.

A Lodge of Good Templars was organized at [illegible]mon Hill, near Sublimity, Marion county, by W R Dunbar, G W C T, on the evening of the 1st inst. The following are the officers: Rev William Capps, W C T; Abby Rice, W V T; Gracie Ashby, R H S; Lucinda Smith, L H S; H J Nott, S; R N English, A S; Alice Dripps, F S; Belle Thomas, T; George Ashby, Chaplain; H Mattoon, M; Jefferson Dripps, D M; G O Ashby, I G; R Phillips, O G; Riley Phillips, Lodge Deputy. The Lodge takes the name of Mountain Lodge.

THE TERRITORIES

The Annual Fair of the Walla Walla Agricultural Society will begin September 15th.

The Walla Walla skating rink has been converted into a warehouse. Hopeful conversion.

There were nine steamers and two sailing vessels at the Seattle wharves last Monday afternoon.

A six year old lad named Hinchliffe, of Olympia, fell out of a hay loft last Monday and broke his arm.

N T Groves, a Walla Walla school teacher, indited brief notes to sundry creditors regretting his inability to pay, etc, and has gone where etc.

The Seattle Coal Company, with their increased facilities, are now delivering coal in that place at the rate of eighty tons and upwards daily.

The mills on the Palouse have been idle about half the time for the last three weeks on account of low water, but this is an extraordinary dry season and perhaps will not occur again soon.

A few days since a Walla Walla farmer became enraged at his horse, which he had attached to a plow, and taking a swingle tree from the plow hit the animal over the head, killing it instantly.

The schooner Superior, having taken on board some 400 tons of coal from the Seattle Coal and Transportation Company's mine, sailed Monday morning for Freeport, where she will receive a deck load of lumber before sailing for San Francisco.

In some localities on the Palouse grain has been damaged to some extent by the excessive heat and will not yield the same per acre that it did last year. The most of the grain in Whitman county is being cut for hay, and wheat may be quite an object there before another harvest.

The Snoqualmie route from the Yakima has been traveled more or less by wagons for the last seven years, but it needs a great deal of work to make it a good road. The people of Kittitass valley propose now to make a good road to the summit of the mountain, trusting to the good people on the west side to complete the same to Seattle this fall if possible.

The Walla Walla Statesman tells of the case of a fruit grower in that valley who started out on the Horse road with a load of apples. He expected to dispose of his cargo at La Grande, but disappointed there he continued on to Baker City, where failing to find a purchaser he turned back, and arriving at the Walla Walla river threw his whole load into the stream.

A letter dated July 15, from Kittitass, W T, to the [illegible] says: "There is but little to report from the mines. Many companies are quite busy making preparations, building wing-dams, getting sluices ready and other fixtures to commence working when the water shall have fallen sufficiently to enable them to operate successfully. There is considerable confidence felt in the mines of the Yakima river. There are about 75 men on the river, and 15 on the Swauk. No person has any idea how many men are in the mountains prospecting the heads of the different streams. [illegible] party returned last week after an [illegible] of a month. They were up on the Cle[illegible], one of the main branches of the Yakima. It is a stream larger than the Walla Walla River. It heads off toward the British line, and drains some very rough looking country."

A Washington dispatch of August 1st says: A rumor which started a few days since to the effect that Secretary Bristow at an early day will retire from the Treasury and accept the Attorney Generalship, was renewed yesterday.

WEDNESDAY MORNING AUGUST 5 1874

THE MISSISSIPPI CASE

The correspondence between Lieut Governor and Acting Governor A K Davis, of Mississippi and Col French of the State militia, shows conclusively that the political troubles in that State originated in the foolish and obstinate pride of the Executive or else in a conspiracy among politicians to prevent a fair election The militia consists of both white and colored men An order was issued by the Lieutenant Governor in the absence of the Governor commanding the militia at Vicksburg to return their arms to the State the ostensible occasion of the order being that there prevailed apprehensions of difficulty [illegible] election day as it was said the presence of these armed men would exasperate a large class of the people and tend to provoke disorders The colored companies refused to surrender their arms and as they were zealous Republicans and most of the white militiamen were of the opposition the latter demanded as a condition of their disarmament that the colored people also should be required to obey the order But instead of taking steps to effect an accommodation of the affair, the Acting Governor immediately telegraphed to Washington to have a detachment of United States troops sent to Vicksburg to preserve order

Upon learning of the action of the Executive Col French forthwith sent to the Acting Governor the following letter

Vicksburg Miss July 23d

To Lieut Gov Davis Jackson Miss I understand you gave as a reason for requesting United States troops sent here that your order for the militia to return their guns to the State has not been obeyed If you will withdraw your request for troops and send me an order to disarm all the militia here and return the guns to the State I can and will execute the order within twenty four hours without assistance from the State or United States and without bloodshed

WILLIAM FRENCH
Colonel Fourth Regiment

To which the Executive replied in the following extraordinary note

JACKSON Miss July 23d

To Wm French Colonel I decline to treat with you as to the manner of executing orders from the office of the Commander in Chief of the State Militia That an order has been set at defiance you admit, but it remains for me to execute it The appeal for troops to be sent to Vicksburg has been forced upon me by the utter disregard and defiance of the laws of the city and State by our citizens

A K DAVIS, Lieutenant Governor

Admit that Davis was technically right, as a matter of strict military discipline his action was foolish in the extreme, and liable to prove harmful The idea of his affecting military dignity and playing martinet because as a matter of form he happened for the moment to be nominally Commander in Chief of the State Militia is too absurd and ridiculous to be thought of without laughter

When the request for troops reached Washington the Secretary of War sought an interview with the Attorney General to whom he presented the case and the Attorney General stated that he saw no Constitutional grounds for the application, as there existed in Mississippi neither violence nor insurrection Thereupon the Secretary declined to grant the request

The refusal of the colored militia to surrender their arms and the conduct of the acting Governor immediately afterwards would appear to justify the suspicion that the whole proceeding was in pursuance of a political conspiracy formed for the purpose of preventing a fair election and Kelloggising the State Assuming this to be the [illegible], it seems a pity Davis and his co conspirators should not have known what the Federal Constitution required as a basis for their application for Federal troops. They could no doubt, have got up the necessary violence or insurrection But taking the more charitable view of their probable motives—and the only other view of which the case admits—it is a misfortune and a disgrace to the State that her executive department should be even temporarily in the hands of an arrogant, obstinate and incompetent bully, who shows himself utterly wanting in the ability to appreciate the position he occupies

OF SIMILAR TENOR

It will be recollected that in the text of Tilton's statement against Beecher, published in these columns on the 27th of last month Mrs Tilton's letter of June 29, 1871, wherein she refers to the opening of her eyes to her sin through reading "Griffith Gaunt" was followed by these two notes

JULY 4, 1874

Oh my dear husband may you never need the discipline of being misled by a good woman as I was by a good man

[No date]

I would mourn greatly if my life was to be made known to father His head would be bowed indeed to the grave

Then followed a remark to the effect that in the original statement of Tilton there was immediately succeeding these another note of similar tenor to the last On receiving the Eastern papers containing the statement in full this third note is found to be very far from one of 'similar tenor,' though it may and doubtless does relate to the same subject matter It is as follows

[No date]

Do not think my ill health is on account of my sin and its discovery My sins and [illegible] record I have carried to my Saviour No my prostration is owing to the suffering I have caused you

It occurs to us this letter is about as hard to get over as any from the hand of the unhappy woman The letter of June 29 said

It [her sin] was when I knew that I was loved to suffer it to grow to a passion A virtuous woman should check instantly an absorbing love But it appeared to me in such [illegible] light That the love I felt and received would harm no one not even you I have believed unalteringly until 4 o clock this afternoon when the heavenly vision dawned upon me I see now as never before the wrong I have done you and hasten immediately to ask your pardon with a penitence so sincere that henceforth (if reason remains) you may trust me implicitly

This alone seemed at the time of its publication a pretty heroic dose to be taken down along with the writer's denial of every imputation of improper conduct But when it is supplemented with the note [illegible] given, which was omitted from the statement as telegraphed to this coast it becomes even stronger The intimation in the former letter of a fear that the remorse she felt might dethrone her reason is scarcely consistent with the notion that her sin was something of a very trifling nature while the assumption in the supplemental note that her husband might reasonably attribute her illness to her "sin and its discovery," are surely pretty weighty evidence that it was a venial offense she was confessing They are not such words as are put on paper for small matters It might be possible that the other party implicated with herself in these letters was some person besides Beecher but we have seen no mention of Mr Beecher offering that explanation and he has certainly given abundant reason for the inference that he would have done so if he could have made that defense with safety

THE PORTLAND PRESS AND THE INTERIOR PAPERS

Remarking upon the accusation frequently urged by the papers of the interior against the Portland press, charging the latter with undue partiality to the capitalists and consequent injustice toward the working classes the Portland Bulletin says

The Portland papers are alive to the fact that not any one interest but that all the diversified interests of our State—those of the cities and towns as well as those of the rural districts—ought to be fostered and encouraged and promoted to the utmost They do not endeavor to ingratiate themselves with any particular class by constant praise and championship of that class whether right or wrong pertinent or impertinent or by complaint and chronic misrepresentation and false accusation against every other class

That is well stated It states the whole truth in as few words as possible so far as concerns the OREGONIAN and if we can overlook what appears to us like running too much in the shadow and under the wing of the Railway Company, the same may be said of the Bulletin Many of the interior papers seem to be afflicted with a singular perversity of reason in their views concerning the Portland press It would be the most suicidal thing that could be done for the State and the Portland papers to array the capital of the city against the labor of the country Consulting their own special interests alone they would be withheld from such madness Depending more directly than almost any other class in society for their own prosperity upon the prosperity of the whole people and of all classes, the publishers of newspapers have proportionately strong motives for building up every class together

SUPPOSE THEY SHOULD

Some of the Republicans of Missouri are unable to perceive the sufficient reasons upon which the State Central Committee acted when they recommended the laying aside of party affiliations and going into a people's movement for reform They seem to think the true policy of the party was to preserve its organization intact and go into the campaign on a straight party platform This it is contended would have enabled the Republicans to keep together, and ultimately have given them the State while this reform party arrangement will scatter them abroad and they will be absorbed by whatever new party may spring into existence The reasoning of these discontented individuals appears correct enough so far as it goes, but they fail to tell us in what respect Missouri or the United States at large would be damaged if the Republicans of that State should all be absorbed in some new party formed upon living issues

AMEND THE GAME LAW

Walking along the street a day or two since we met a lad who was carrying a string of young grouse numbering, we should judge not less than a dozen These birds were but a little larger than full grown quails And the game law permits grouse to be killed at any time after the 1st of July a month earlier than this flock was killed If the preservation of game birds is an object of sufficient moment to justify any legislative action, the law of 1872 should be so altered as to make it more efficient No grouse or pheasant should be taken earlier than the 1st of August Let the members of the Legislature bear this in mind, and modify the law to suit the case The amendment will hardly be opposed from any quarter unless by some person who opposes the entire game law

George Strong was the last unfortunate He came home to see his mother over Sunday as good boys ought to was inveigled by a Statesman stockholder into dropping in to see the chief of the thunderers, and in the next issue he is plastered from head to foot with [illegible] ready to be swallowed alive This is expected to bring a rejoinder in kind which—if it comes—will be spread in dust on the columns of the Statesman and will figure in the second edition of the circular By the way that is how all his first rate notices were earned and all his capital for self puffery is got by that sort of 'you tickle me and I tickle you' reciprocity Next —Salem Record

Some people appear to have an idea that it is consistent with decent journalism to shadow a gentleman in order to ascertain whom he calls upon and then to make his personal courtesies an occasion for disgusting gossip We sincerely trust there is only one such person connected with Salem newspapers

If anybody can tell why Mr Beecher cannot state whether he was guilty or innocent of the charges made against him without first having an opportunity to inspect some old letters we should be extremely glad to have the matter explained as we confess the most complete lack of ability to comprehend it without aid from one source The press dispatches of the 30th ult stated that he was then waiting to get inspection of the original letters in [illegible] Moulton's possession

TRUE ECONOMY

August [illegible]

To the Editor of the Oregonian

The report comes that the State capitol appropriation is exhausted and that work has been discontinued Now let the Legislature direct the covering in of the unfinished walls so as to protect them from injury and this let them remain for the coming two years and apply all the money the State can pay for public buildings to the erection of an Insane Asylum We are not suffering for the capitol The State is paying but $[illegible] a year for rent—need not pay more than $[illegible] or $3,000—while it is losing from $[illegible] to $10,000 per annum from not being able to take care of its own insane Every motive of economy and humanity urges the discontinuance of work on the capitol and the building of an insane asylum The State is possessed of a beautiful ground for the purpose and most sadly needs the asylum It is in no pressing need of the capitol and can easily await a more convenient season for the prosecution of work upon it We cannot afford to be taxed to carry on both buildings and the capitol must give way to [illegible] the more [illegible]

ON THE TRACK.—A very narrow escape from a fearful accident occurred early yesterday morning ... the Albany express ... coming down the track. Just as the train ... of the ... upper end of Canemah and was rounding a sharp curve, the engineer ... saw the locomotive ... with ... speed ... she started to cross the track in ... running in an ... direction ... as fast as the engineer ... down brake ... whistle ... cow ... the animal should ... With ... the ... filled with the cow. In an instant the ... ran ... and ... the ... blood ... the locomotive leaped from the track. By this time the brakes were ... with the clasp of a dozen giant ... and the engineer had reversed. However, the ... of the train pushed the locomotive forward some distance, ... ties ... As the force was expended the locomotive toppled over and ... on the side. At the point where the accident happened the track winds ... between the base of a rocky bluff and the river ... the track which prevented ... rolling into the river. Had the ... the ... would have ... the water. A dispatch was ... to this city and a locomotive started from the car shop with all speed, taking along the wrecking ... In a short time the locomotive was righted ... the train brought down. No one ... was hurt save the engineer, who was slightly bruised. The damages to the locomotive are small and she will be ready to run in a few days. It was certainly an extraordinary escape from a fearful casualty.

GETTING CORRECT TIME.—Next in importance to having correct habits should come correct time. On obtaining correct time depends ... of very ... But ... we ... all enabled to take our meals with ... Portland can now boast ... time as absolutely correct as it is possible to obtain anywhere. Mr L C Henrichsen the well known ... procured directly from New York a few weeks ago a transit by which time can be reckoned with an exactness not ... any other instrument. This superb instrument was patented May 24th, 1870, and is from the well known manufacturing firm of John Bliss & Co. This transit is a very delicate instrument and by means of it the correct time can be determined to the one hundredth fraction of a second. It is kept on top of the new Masonic Hall, where observations can be taken better than from any other building in the city. Every day, precisely 12 o'clock—just as old Sol crosses the meridian—Mr Henrichsen examines the transit and makes the necessary observations. Attached to the instrument is a small galvanic battery, telegraphic key and a wire leading from the transit to the jewelry shop of Mr Henrichsen on First street. At the moment he takes the observations a signal is sent over the wire to the shop. A person stands there and as the correct time is dispatched he makes the required alterations to the chronometer, providing that instrument varies any within the twenty four hours. If there has been the slightest variation the transit will detect it at a glance. By means of this the chronometer can be corrected and time as perfect as it is necessary or possible to have be obtained. This is the only transit in the State.

CIGAR STUMPS.—Simple and insignificant as a burnt out cigar stump may appear to the average mind, it is nevertheless capable of producing great damage. Especially is this the case when the smoker thoughtlessly casts the stump aside without taking the precaution to extinguish the fire. East Portland smokers seem very remiss in this regard, as quite recently the bridges in that city have been set on fire in several places just from lighted cigar stumps. Fortunately each time the fire was discovered in its incipiency and promptly extinguished. On Monday evening President VanCleave called the attention of the Board of Trustees to the matter and suggested the expediency of appointing a night watchman to patrol the principal bridges on I and Water streets, whose duty it should be to carefully guard the structures from fire which might be communicated from cigar stumps or otherwise. In the same connection he adverted to the recent instances wherein the bridges had been set on fire by thoughtlessly depositing burning cigar stumps on the roadway. Mr VanCleave stated that such action on the part of the Board would in his judgment be a wise precaution. Considerable damage might result in the manner spoken of to the bridges. These structures were erected for the convenience of the public at a large outlay, and it was worth while to guard them from damage or destruction. It would be necessary to hire a watchman but a few months, as all such precautions would be useless after the fall rains commenced. No action was taken by the Board.

UNSAFE CONDITION.—The bridge which is situated within the corporate limits of East Portland and known as the ... Ditch Bridge, is reported to be in an unsafe condition ... the attention of the Board of Trustees was directed to the matter ... weeks ... one of the members of the Committee to whom the subject was referred, made a personal examination of the bridge. He reported on Monday evening to the Board that the condition of the structure was such as to place the traveling public in jeopardy of life and limb. Some repairs have recently been made to the bridge by ... a few new plank down, but there ... number of old, worn out planks which are broken and therefore dangerous to teams and wagons. In addition the ... of the Committee reported that the whole frame of the bridge was in an unsafe state ... that a person by moving the body from side to side could shake the structure. If the bridge is allowed to ... in its present condition we shall ... the point of our pencil for a first class ... The bridge is situated in a thoroughfare which is much traveled, and unless some prompt action is taken by the Board a very serious casualty will occur some of these days.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—A few evenings since the residence of Capt Sumner at the corner of Fourth and Morrison streets was discovered on fire. Mr Goodnough who lives adjoining was apprised of the situation by a servant girl who worked at his house. He instantly attached a hose to a hydrant which stood in his yard and directed a stream of water against the fire and soon extinguished it. At the time neither Capt Sumner nor any of his family were at home, the doors were locked and the windows securely fastened. But Mr Goodnough effected an entrance and thus ... The fire originated from ... which was accidentally dropped ... one side of the stove. It ... and finally was ... box and ... he ... just burned a hole in ... the flames ... By his efforts and presence of mind Mr Goodnough saved the premises ...

IN NO WAY CONNECTED.—We are requested to state by Mr W C Gilbert, President of the Portland Amateur Dramatic Association, that no member belonging to that organization is in any manner whatever connected with the company of amateurs who are to produce the Massacre of Glen Coe ... at the Oro Fino Theatre. We are further requested to state that the latter company have no authority to place the name or names of any member of the Portland Amateur Dramatic Association on their programmes as they have done.

ROAD PETITION.—The evening paper says: The people residing between this city and Springville are circulating quite a number of petitions asking the County Commissioners to relocate the road through that section. One of the petitions asking the Commissioners to place the road up on ground which has never been overflowed, has been very generally signed, and it is probable that it will meet the views of the Board and will, in the end, be authorized, as it will accommodate the greatest number.

GRANTED A FURLOUGH.—Rev T L Eliot, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, has been granted a leave of absence by his congregation, for one month. This will embrace the entire month of August. During the hot sweltering days of the present month Mr Eliot will be absent from the city. He will leave this morning for Clatsop beach, when after a few days sojourn, he will start for the Sound. Mr Eliot will be in the city several times during his vacation.

INSPECTING TOUR.—Early Sunday morning the United States tender Shubrick, which has been lying opposite the city for some days, steamed off down the river. At Astoria the vessel was joined by Gen Michler, Commodore Spotts and Capt Davis, who left here on Monday morning. Before the return of these gentlemen they will pay inspecting visits to all the lighthouses along the Sound. The annual supplies will also be left at the light houses.

FOOT CUT.—A small boy residing in the southern portion of the city met with a severe accident yesterday. While splitting some stove wood the ax glanced and struck one foot. A great toe and the one adjoining it were almost severed from the foot. The dismembered toes were united by a surgeon and the prospects for that boy to hobble about on crutches for some weeks to come never were more flattering.

RELIEF COMMITTEE.—A number of the members of this committee met last evening, pursuant to adjournment, but the attendance not being as large as desirable, it was thought best to adjourn till Friday evening next at 8 o'clock, so a motion to meet at the same place at that time was carried. A prompt and full attendance is earnestly requested.

EXCURSION.—Last evening the Arcadian Base Ball Club decided upon holding a grand moonlight excursion on Saturday evening. A boat and barge has been engaged and the East Portland band will provide the music. The members of the club have had experience in such matters and promise to make the affair a pleasant one. Full particulars to-morrow.

AN AMATEUR PAPER.—Several young men in the city have in view the publication of a monthly paper to be known as the Oregon Amateur. Oscar Cline is editor, and contributions to its columns from the young folks will be accepted. The first number will appear on or about the 20th inst.

MUSIC AT THE PLAZA.—The City Band will give the following programme this afternoon at the plaza: Parade March, Gungel; Sweet Spirit Hear My Prayer, Ross; Katharina Waltz, Strauss; Overture—Nebuchadnezzar, Verdi; Schottische, Kiesler; Fire Gallop, Poudert.

BOARD OF DELEGATES.—In pursuance of a call issued by the President, J W Whalley, there will be a special meeting of the Board of Delegates of the Portland Fire Department this evening at 8 o'clock at the Police Court Room. A full attendance requested.

COURT.—The U S Circuit Court will convene this morning at 10 o'clock. The Circuit Court will convene on Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. To day the Board of County Commissioners will be in session for the transaction of county business.

TEA MEETING.—The members of Hall street Church invite their friends to meet them at their church this evening to enjoy a Tea Meeting to be conducted after the most approved English style. All anticipate an unusually social occasion.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

In another column appears the new announcement from Gray's Music Store. The establishment is well stocked with Steinways and Burdetts, beside an immense assortment of sheet music, including the very latest productions. The house is managed by capable hands and prompt attention is given to orders. No establishment is better known than Gray's, and an extended mention is unnecessary. If you want something choice in the musical line call at Gray's. Orders for anything not in store will be filled at the earliest possible moment. A word to the wise, etc.

During the evening Mr Campbell sang with Mr Wilkie the duet Excelsior ... from Balfe ... in a very artistic manner. He ... sang ... Simon the Cellarer. The Cavatina ... was rendered by Madame Bishop, whose first appearance on the stage was received with an ovation of applause. Mme Bishop sang with her usual warmth, power and ... combined with a method and grace, the perfection of the highest art and a style the result of the most careful training and rare natural talent. Her efforts met with prolonged applause and won for the great cantatrice an overwhelming encore. Madame Bishop then appeared in the ballad Why Do I Weep for Thee, which was sweetly sung and encored. She sang the duet Sunset with Mr Wilkie in a charming manner. Mrs Marriner of San Francisco, next appeared and sang the Cavatina from Donizetti, In questa Semplice. This lady gives evidence of the possession of musical talent of a high order which, added to the attraction of youthful and comely face and graceful figure, combined to render the performance one of great interest and pleasure. Mrs Marriner's voice is a clear pure beautiful soprano. Her trills are brilliant, ringing and fluent. She manifests on the stage little nervousness, but not the slightest tremor was perceptible in her exquisite voice. She sang the ballad I Love My Love with such pathos and sentiment that she was encored and rendered in a felicitous manner Memories of Departed Days. Mr Alfred Wilkie, who is well known to this public, acquitted himself with great credit and satisfaction. He sang Once Again in the duet of Excelsior, Sunset, and Beware, and won several deserved encores. But the gem of the entertainment was the grand duetto Deh Conte Norma, which was rendered in a style which defies all description by Mrs Marriner and Mme Bishop. It was one of the finest vocal efforts it has ever been our privilege to hear. Under the harmonious blending of the exquisite voices the audience appeared spellbound and when the last notes died away they were rapturously applauded and compelled to appear again and repeat a portion of the duetto. The evening's entertainment concluded with the laughing quartette, Vadasi via di qua, in which appeared Mme Bishop, Mrs Marriner, Messrs Campbell and Wilkie. To morrow evening the second concert of the series will be given, at which Madame Bishop will sing the Last Rose of Summer, Home Sweet Home and others of her favorite selections. Let the hall be well filled.

The farmers of Lane county are now actively engaged in harvest, and from reports in all directions the crops will turn out as well this year as last. There are one third more acres in grain in this county this year than last. A fair price will make money plenty, if our farmers do not pay one third or one fourth for transportation. Twenty one cents from Eugene to Portland is too much.

In these times when men count their coin before expending any considerable sum, it is conclusive evidence that money is decidedly scarce, and a man is calculating on the best and surest mode of making the most of what spare change he has. Now in buying clothing the buyer reflects before making a purchase. He wants to know where by expending the least money he can at the same time receive something fully worth the money expended. We would advise all in want of something substantial as well as cheap to call on Beck & Waldman.

Curing versus Cobbling.

There are many medicines that give transient relief in sickness without touching the source and seat of the complaint. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is not one of these. The great tonic and restorative does not cobble the diseased and enfeebled system. It is not a mere palliative that only temporarily controls a few unpleasant symptoms. No, its invigorating, regulating, restorative principle penetrates to the very source of the difficulty in the fluids and solids of the body, and hence its cures are radical and thorough. In dyspepsia it strengthens the stomach, in liver complaint it regulates the flow of bile, in constipation it promotes a punctual habit of body, in nervous ailments it tones the sentient and motive fibres, in rheumatism it counteracts pain, and in cases of general debility it rehabilitates the emaciated frame.

SIR MARMADUKE'S MUSINGS

BY THEODORE TILTON

[The following peculiar poem from Mr Tilton written at the time of his troubles has a singular interest now]

I won a noble fame
But with a sudden frown
The people snatched my crown
And in the mire trod down
My lofty name

I bore a bounteous purse
And beggars by the way
Then blessed me day by day,
But I grown poor as they
Have now their curse

I gained what men call friends
But now their love is hate
And I have learned too late
How mated minds unmate,
And friendship ends

I clasped a woman's breast
As if her heart I knew
Or fancied would be true
Who proved—alas she too!—
False like the rest.

I now am all bereft—
As when some tower doth fall,
With battlements and wall
And gate and bridge and all—
And nothing left

But I account it worth
All pangs of fair hopes crossed—
All love and honors lost—
To gain the heavens at cost
Of losing earth

So lest I be inclined
To render ill for ill—
Henceforth in me instill
O God a sweet good will
To all mankind.

SLEEPY HOLLOW Nov 1 1871

THE TRADE OF KIDNAPPING

THE DETECTIVES EAGER FOR A SHARE IN ITS PROFITS—ANOTHER CHILD STOLEN—PARTICULARS OF THE SECONDAUDACIOUS CRIME.

[From the N Y Herald]

PHILADELPHIA July 23—The heartrending news of another kidnapping case is made public this afternoon under precisely the same circumstances as those connected with that of Charley Ross A little boy just four years old whose parents reside at the corner of Forty eighth street and Lancaster Pike, but whose name is for the present purposely withheld was yesterday approached by two men in a wagon and prevailed to get in One of the men was black the other white The little one readily consented and no word has reached the parents concerning him since

ANOTHER PERSONAL

The latest personal in the Ross case is the following C K R—I will agree to terms in every particular

WOOSTER MAKES A STATEMENT

Wooster made a statement this morning giving a history of his criminal career His real name is Christian Worcester He was born in Massachusetts During the war he was at Indianapolis and was appointed by General Hovey a Chief Special Agent of the Secret Service with the rank of colonel General Warner was commandant of the post He states in conclusion

I returned to this healthy city and was fastened on again for a little blackmailing job and sent below I got out on the 24th of April and went to New York Well, I didn't do much there but what I did worked all right I returned to Philadelphia on the 18th of June, and about the 23d I quarreled with somebody in a saloon and received an elegant black eye which laid me up for about two weeks I had a finely colored eye when the boy Ross was stolen, and was at home

WOOSTER RELEASED

He explicitly denies all knowledge of or complicity in the abduction of the little boy

As no evidence has been obtained against Wooster he was this evening released by the authorities He is a well known criminal, but promises to do better in the future.

THE REWARD OF TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS

As announced in the Herald this morning the Mayor of Philadelphia has offered a reward of $20 000 for the recovery of the abducted child, little Charley Ross and the arrest of his kidnapper By a special act of Assembly the Mayor was prohibited from offering any reward on the part of the city itself and to evade this the citizens of this commonwealth have of their own accord contributed the amount and requested the Mayor to announce it under his own official signature

AVARICIOUS ARDOR OF THE POLICE

The scene around the Mayor's office to day baffles description Detectives public and private have been rushing wildly to and fro and it seems a foregone conclusion that if the case is not a bogus one, and if the child is eventually discovered, it will be by some other person than the haphazard gentleman in this agreement, Captain Heins or any one of his three or four favorites These gentlemen, after waiting twenty five days have actually accomplished nothing at all, nor has the notorious ring master, Bill Mann, or any of his neophytes succeeded in doing anything better If the child should be found and if Mr Mann could convince the public that the restoration to its parents was owing to his own personal and superior cunning, of course such an impression would be sure to inspire success for him in the coming fall campaign But his apparent efforts even when coupled with those of the detective police have availed nothing and the veteran politician must needs look elsewhere for his popular campaign document

IMBECILITY OF THE DETECTIVES

There is no telling what exertion may be made elsewhere but it is safe to say that, as far as present indications are concerned the local detective management will be as ignorant of the whereabouts of the child twenty days hence, provided it is not in the meantime discovered by some one else, as it is to day The representative newspapers of the city almost without exception, blame the officers for their bungling management throughout and one of them to-day speaks as follows

The impression, we are sorry to say begins to gain ground that this sad business has not been well managed by the authorities from Chief Jones down Not one half of the detective force has been assigned to the duty of detecting the scoundrels while the police have spent valuable time in ineffectual efforts to silence the press, the agency which could have given them the most assistance

There is really at the time of this writing nothing new in the affair to communicate The department is continually receiving telegrams but all are based upon such slight evidence that the Chief of Police considers none of them worthy of confidence

THE JERSEY CHURCH SCANDAL—A very slim congregation attended the Prospect avenue Presbyterian church on Jersey City Heights yesterday morning but there were a great many persons attracted by curiosity who occupied the pews The services were opened by the Rev John S Glendenning, who offer 1 a fervent prayer The pastor then made the following announcement According to an arrangement made three weeks ago my vacation of three weeks ago begins to morrow You are all aware that a charge against my character awaits judicial investigation Meanwhile I content myself with affirming my innocence and asking the Church to unite with me in resting in the Lord and waiting patiently for Him The Rev Mr Moore will now occupy the pulpit and the Rev Dr Wiggins of the city of New York will occupy it for the greater part of my vacation" The law has not yet relaxed its hold on the accused shepherd of the fold He was first arrested at the instance of the overseer of the poor, who demanded that bonds be given for the support of an illegitimate child that would otherwise be a burden to the city On Saturday the shepherd was again arrested on the charge of seduction and he was arrested a third time and compelled to give bonds before Judge Bedle in the sum of $4 000 in a suit for a breach of promise of marriage Miss Pomeroy lays damages at $10 000 The examination on the first charge will take place next Thursday before Justice Aldridge The only answer the accused pastor makes to the charge against him is that there's nothing in it —New York World July 20th

ANOTHER CLERICAL WOLF AND A FOOLISH LAMB—New York, July 30—An afternoon paper says it is reported that a New Orleans clergyman eloped with a member of his flock and arrived here a few days ago proceeding to a small town on the Hudson river railroad The guilty parties were tracked by the clergyman's wife who captured her husband and took him back in triumph

At London travel has been resumed through Temple Bar, that structure having been propped up and declared safe

HOW A RAT WHIPPED AN ALLIGATOR

A whole drug store on Magazine street is the happy possessor of a young and domesticated alligator This little crocodile has become quite the pet and plaything of the establishment he is of an amiable disposition fond of music and dinner and quite submissive shedding tears and showing repentance whenever it is found necessary to correct him It was resolved by the clerks in the establishment that as the alligator had reached his third birth day and increased to three feet in length to utilize him to put him to some other employment than that of a mere pet At first it was thought that he might be turned loose to reduce the Republican vote of this State by picking up stray pickaninnies for whom he is commonly supposed to have a great love but this was thought a chimerical and dangerous enterprise and therefore given up It was finally concluded to make use of Crocky, the alligator, as a cat The store teemed with rats and mice who made daily inroads on the quinine and ipecac and it is well known that alligators have a peculiar and estimable hatred toward rats A rat of peculiar practice on was caught the other day and imprisoned in a barrel of calomel There he had spent at least a week on this meagre insufficient and injurious diet he was thin weak and melancholy his health was broken his constitution gone Rat and alligator were put together in a box and a numerous audience crowded around to get the front place The two enemies soon awoke to an appreciation of the case The rat safely and snugly ensconced himself in a corner The alligator hesitated a second scratched his head (metaphorically) and having made up his mind as to the mode of attack advanced slowly toward the rat with wide open jaws The rat trembled, there was no escape nothing but the wide open mouth of the alligator before him Without hesitation like Curtius he jumped straight into the yawning gulf and getting a good hold on the lower lip of the alligator swung himself to the ground The saurian gave a squeak and swung himself around, the rat finally letting go, victor in the first round The alligator, however was not daunted and advanced with the same tactics The rat this time by a most agile movement, leaped entirely over the alligator Getting behind him he now proceeded to chew and gnaw away The unwieldy animal could not get round to defend his hind legs By a good use of his tail the alligator again got free and advanced desperately, though with flagging courage at the daring rodent With equal success the rat again sprang into the air alighting on the alligator's back The fight was over then The alligator could not shake his enemy off could not dislodge him and finally gave up the fight, laying himself down on his belly in a submissive attitude The rat was set at liberty and given the run of all the drugs and medicines whilst the poor alligator was doomed to disgrace and ridicule His master no longer feels proud of his rough pet and offers to go in bathing among a thousand full grown crocodiles without the least danger —New Orleans Picayune

Wheat in Liverpool by mail advices from San Francisco, 11s 5d @11s 9d for average California and 11s 10d@12s 4d for club

Our local money market is still in the easy condition before noted the demand for funds to move the crops not setting in quite as brisk as was expected owing to the fact that farmers and exporters are not able to agree on a market price for wheat, the latter not seeing the way clear at any advance on the present offers, and the former confident of an advance A lack of funds is not a cause of the decided dullness which prevails in grain circles

Secretary Bristow, in speaking of the placing of the balance of the new five per cent loan says that he is opposed to all syndicates He is in favor of allowing any person to come to the Treasury and buy bonds He is opposed to the law requiring bids, and will recommend a material modification of the law at the next session of Congress so as to cover his views At present he is prohibited from increasing the bonded debt if but for a few weeks and as the law requires ninety days notice before interest can be stopped (by which means alone the Secretary can compel an exchange), it is impossible for him to operate as favorably as he desires He believes that by making direct sales he could so popularize the loan that the bonds could be disposed of in a short time A few days ago a party desired to purchase five thousand dollars worth of these bonds at the Treasury but had to be informed that he would have to buy them at New York and pay a premium of two per cent The Secretary thinks that many are deterred from investing in this loan on account of the two per cent exaction for the benefit of the brokers

Marine Casualties.

The following casualties have occurred to vessels arriving at and departing from the port of San Francisco during the past year, as per report of the Harbor Master

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamer Costa Rica ran ashore near Lime Point September 17th 1873, saved in a badly damaged condition

Schooner Wm Irelan lost at Umpqua bar October 17th 187

Schooner Final lost at Stewart's Point November 14th 18

Schooner Ann M Iverson lost at Point Arena December 5th, 1873

Schooner May Hare drifted ashore at King's river and all hands lost December 10th 1873

Schooner Arizona lost at Cuffey's Cove December 28th 1873

Schooner Filida from Coos Bay for San Francisco was seen bottom up 150 miles W S W off Cape Blanco fifteen persons lost.

Ship Panther lost near Narrows Island, Puget Sound, January 17th 1874

Steamer Diana lost eighty miles south of Cape Flattery January 1874

Schooner Laura May lost January 10th 1874 nine miles north of Coos Bay bar

Schooner John Hunter lost November 22 1873 at Laguna Bay

Schooner J Wightman Jr lost January 19th 1874 at Point Gorda all hands (six persons) lost

Schooner H Caroline lost on Tomales Bar February 16th 1874

Bark Chris Mitchell lost at Dungeness Spit March 3d 1874 three lives lost.

Schooner J Mora Moss capsized six miles south west of Stewart's Point, and lost one man

Ship Jas Cheston drifted ashore in a calm April 24th 1874 near the Ocean Side House She was pulled off by steam tugs on the 26th

The Br steamer Prince Alfred struck on Duxbury Reef June 24th, 1874, and was run ashore to keep her from sinking She became a total loss

The only casualties in the same time to vessels to or from this port, were as follows

Am ship Roswell Sprague hence for Liverpool Feb 2, 1873 driven by storms put into Valparaiso in great distress May 10th One man and cargo lost. Ship saved

Am ship Confidence hence July 24th 1873 encountered severe storms off eastern coast of South America and put into Rio Oct — Cargo of wheat badly damaged and vessel leaky

French brig Sidi 246 tons for this port crossing the bar without a pilot drifted on Sand Island cargo lost and vessel badly damaged but afterward raised and repaired

Br bark Silver Cloud hence for United Kingdom March 1874 with 18 centals of wheat abandoned at sea off Cape Horn—date not given

Miscellaneous

The whole number of sea going vessels arriving at San Francisco during the year ending June 1874 was 28 The total number of arrivals was 919—seas of steamers [illegible] of brigs and 290 of schooners

The new steamboat law imposes a fine of one hundred dollars upon a steamboat owner who neglects to have the regulations hung up in his boat when running

Mr Wells a successful hop grower of Polk county says The hop crop is in a prosperous condition and promises well as the seasons in Oregon are always favorable The rains that occur in other States when the hops are ripening destroy or injure the best properties of the hop and depreciate the price but with us the hop matures perfectly and retains its strength unimpaired

The Walla Walla Union of the 1st inst says Harvesting is progressing quite rapidly The weather has been most favorable for the work except that it has been a little hotter than was absolutely necessary to the comfort of those engaged in the field In some neighborhoods the grain is all cut and the threshing has been pushed along well towards completion Last year the threshers were kept running until November but this year they will not be required to run so late by from one to two months Partly because of the great increase in the number of machines in the valley and partly because of there being so much grain to thresh By the last of the present month the greater part of the threshing will be over As yet no wheat worth mentioning has been brought to market but within a very few days it will commence to come in

SHIPWRECK AND STARVATION

SUFFERINGS OF THE CREW OF THE [illegible]

How many and various are [illegible] brave fellows who go down to [illegible] romance cannot add a suggestion [illegible] of their adventures, fact [illegible] velous than fiction In February [illegible] of Greenock, which on [illegible] Shields to Bombay coal laden [illegible] fire from spontaneous combustion [illegible] took to their boats heading [illegible] islands The boats kept [illegible] days, when a separation was [illegible] cause the currents offered [illegible] their holding together The [illegible] long boat headed for Cochin [illegible] the gig, the second [illegible] narrative, with four of the crew [illegible] Both mates [illegible] Maldives, but after a time Webster [illegible] by a heavy sea, and [illegible] the gig, soon lost sight of [illegible] March the pinnace was [illegible] windward Then the water [illegible] gave out, and far from land [illegible] threatened with the horrors of [illegible] which must end, if no [illegible] came, in the awful death [illegible] starvation In their extremity [illegible] lots to determine who should [illegible] others might live The ship's [illegible] but Webster, who had been [illegible] this awful lottery, was aroused [illegible] life Then when Webster [illegible] crew determined to kill him, [illegible] and whom he had saved [illegible] taking and warning the inter[illegible] next day with his gun [illegible] dropped off to sleep, [illegible] aroused by the struggling for [illegible] by which was to be [illegible] ing of his life Three days [illegible] taining nourishment, [illegible] half crazed, attempted to sink [illegible] ster prevented Two days [illegible] without incident when [illegible] peated his threat to [illegible] or failing to kill the [illegible] pointed the shot gun [illegible] breast and, [illegible] the snapped would have taken [illegible] into her cap upon the gun [illegible] for game in a bird flying over [illegible] dropped it and the greedy [illegible] work of it bones feathers [illegible] days more the crew just kept [illegible] the barnacles which attached [illegible] the bottom of the boat [illegible] some of them became delirious [illegible] the bottom of the boat [illegible] struck him with an iron pin, [illegible] from the wounds was [illegible] men in a tin vessel and eagerly [illegible] commenced general fight [illegible] on one another Webster and [illegible] what they could to prevent [illegible] and keeping the watches which [illegible] entirely abandoned Finally [illegible] first day out they were [illegible] from [illegible] and carried into [illegible] other crews were never heard [illegible] England Webster wears an [illegible] gift of the Queen

H Dunham of Liscomb W[illegible] succeeded in taming a sandhill [illegible] spring as a flock of wild cranes [illegible] over his farm the pet set up [illegible] pair whereupon one of the wild [illegible] flock and came down to try [illegible] civilized life It stays and [illegible] of being a little shy of the [illegible] seems quite contented

SPEECH OF SENATOR MORTON [illegible] July 3 at Senator Morton [illegible] mense audience at the Opera [illegible] opening the Republican campaign [illegible] speech It was received with [illegible] of approval by the audience
